

only to any two ani-
similar predator/
Gatorade bottles now, and num-
dreds of pointless things later.

en...
lighter; it should have read 500 millionth. We regret the error.

iller) ★★★★★ 1/2

(Tiwari), who would
istant, to look for his
ivan Banerjee. The eventually reveals a
et in Kolkata — then
s.
crew succeed to a
reating a war-torn
with its busy streets,
and people. The cin-kos Andritsakis deserves a special mention.

The film moves at a leisurely pace in the first half, placing the plot into context. The second half is its undoing when too many things unfold too quickly. The reveals that are often well-told barely have that 'I-didn't-see-that-coming' moment. And everything culminates into an ending that again dies on pace. The movie is also marred by the music that is jarring. The soundtrack while experimental, is a distraction and ill-placed.

Rajput is competent as Bakshy. It wouldn't be a flight of fancy to think Rajit Kapur's cult-favourite portrayal inspired Rajput enough. Tiwari (of Udaan and Go Goa Gone fame) is a delight as the bumbling Ajit. Chang as Kanai Dao makes the most of his screen time.

All flaws aside, Detective Byomkesh Bakshy! is an entertaining package. It is surely not Banerjee's best, will be far from the delight that was Khosla Ka Ghosla and Sharadindu might even refuse his stamp of approval, but sach ke aas paas waala jhoot pakadna mushkil hota hai.

—biprorshee.das@timesgroup.com

Very Good★★★★★ Excellent★★★★★

PIC: NISHIKANT GAMRE

Gully cricket — in an ivory tower

> Continued from page 1

Expectedly, the conversation turned to India's loss at the World Cup. Mehta was forgiving. "It's like having a bad day in the office," he said. Considering how poor the team's performance was before the World Cup, it was an achievement to reach the semi-finals, he said. Meanwhile, both Mehta and Srinivasan, who are Sachin Tendulkar fans, appreciated Indian cricket captain MS Dhoni's ability to keep cool under pressure, take calculated risks and innovate on the field. Biyani too admired Dhoni's leadership quality but also mentioned Clive Lloyd for his ability to get so much out of all the players and make them play as a team even when they came from different islands. Biyani also mentioned Kapil Dev, who made his team believe in itself even when he was amongst the youngest in the team playing with some very senior players.

JACKET FOR OUR POCKET PAL

these statement mobile covers and
o out your phone in style

eddy@
oup.com

Taylor Swift
goes old-school
with her cover

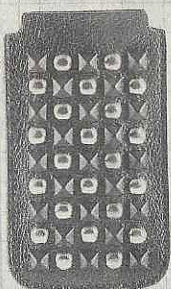

ul Smith
en's mini
int iPhone
se ₹6,900

Tumi
leather
cover for
iPhone 6
₹6,000

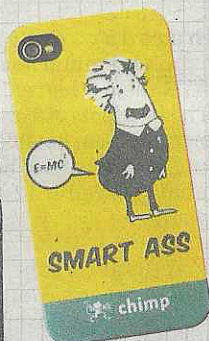

Diesel
black gold
mobile
cover
₹10,990

ebay.in Iron
Man red & black
phone cover
₹1,403

VoxPopClothing..
com Game of Thrones mobile
cover ₹850

Tappukidukaan.
com smart ass
phone cover ₹499

Bradley Cooper
appears to be leaning
towards bunny ears

fashionandyou.com
Batman Joker cover
for Samsung S3 ₹535

Will.I.am
matches
his bling
with his
phone
cover

PICS: GETTY IMAGES

— Grey matters to marketers

Mumbai-based Vickram Sethi has put together a unique exhibition that features products and services across sectors catering to consumers above 50

sujata.reddy
@timesgroup.com

While many brands and advertisers vie for the attention of consumers in the 20s to 40s age bracket, Mumbai-based Vickram Sethi, 62, has been quietly exploring the untapped potential of the 50-plus segment.

Sethi will be curating a show titled — The Fifty Plus — to be held from May 8-10 at Nehru Centre, Mumbai. The exhibition will include about 100 participants from sectors like health, wellness, beauty, money, insurance, law, travel and leisure, property and lifestyle. Sethi is the founder of Giftex, a tradeshow that started 28 years ago. Corporate gifting and incentive merchandise is not restricted to the festive season anymore but is now a year long marketing exercise. Thanks to Giftex, sales, marketing and HR managers now have a choice of multiple products. Sethi is also the CMD of the Institute of Contemporary India Art and net based auction house, Astaguru.com.

"If you are under 70 years of age, you still fall in the 'younger older years' category. People in this segment have a lot to look forward to and there is a big market for products and services that they need," says Sethi. The exhibition will therefore try and bring brands that enrich their lifestyle together. Some of the big names likely to be present at the exhibit includes Tata Housing, Standard Chartered Bank, Centre for Medical Weight Loss, Astaguru.com, Institute of Contemporary Indian Art and Oldgoldindia.com.

Sethi says, "Everything from travel itineraries to beauty treatments, homes and even financial schemes are targeted towards this age group. So why not gather all these consumers all under one roof and help them make a choice?"

To participate in the exhibition, call on 022-22075448/22015837 or visit us on www.50plusindia.com

"Today, the quality of life of people who are above 50 years of age is drastically different than what it was a generation or two earlier"

Gully cricket in an ivory tower

Industry captains living in posh Mahalaxmi skyscraper channel their inner Dhoni and Sachin

rashmi.menon@timesgroup.com

On Thursday evening, Mahalaxmi's premium housing complex, Raheja Vivarea, was abuzz. The residents of Tower A and B, many of them notable private equity and business heads of Mumbai, played a 12-over cricket match.

Axis Capital's Dharmesh Mehta and Hetal Gandhi, MD, Tano India Advisors, were the rival captains. The players included Ajay Srinivasan, CEO, Aditya Birla Financial Services, Future Group director Sunil Biyani, Catwalk's Asif Merchant and Kunal Punjabi of National Australian Bank. Mehta's team won the toss and decided to bat first. Srinivasan, who initially served as the umpire, later came on the pitch as a batsman. A diehard fan, he has a piece of Lord's turf in his collection of cricket memorabilia.

The match lasted beyond midnight and ended in a tie. But it was a success, and in the coming months, Vivarea could take on neighbors Lodha Bellissimo and Ashoka Towers.

Axis Capital's Dharmesh Mehta and Aditya Birla Financial Services CEO Ajay Srinivasan

PIC: NISHIKANT GAMRE

Mehta and Srinivasan are fans of Dhoni

Turn to page 2 >

Follow us

COLAB

097734

098925

SwissTi

Mall (CE

022288

097734

097734

To know

Retail P